1 AN ACT to amend 166.215 (1) of the statutes; relating to: regional emergency
2 response team requirements.

Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Under current law, regional emergency response teams respond to level A releases of hazardous substances. Level A releases involve the release of hazardous substances that require the highest level of protective equipment for personnel because of the high degree of risk to the skin and respiratory system.

This bill requires the regional emergency response teams to have members that meet the highest standards required under federal law and the National Fire Protection Association and to have at least one member who is trained in each of the appropriate specialty areas under the National Fire Protection Association standard.

The people of the state of Wisconsin, represented in senate and assembly, do enact as follows:
